

Fundraising Idea- Dance Party

Boogie the night away and raise money at the same time!

A dance party provides many options for raising support. In addition to charging an entrance fee, you may also offer song requests for $1, sell event t-shirts, or hold a raffle or silent auction simultaneously at the event to give guests something to do while they're taking a break from the dance floor.

The first step is to find a venue to rent out the space for free and to set the date. Then assemble a team to help broadcast the party and used social media, such as Facebook and twitter to help get the word out.

Ask local bakeries and grocery stores if they'd be willing to donate refreshments and organize any catering services if needed. If you plan to have a raffle or silent auction, ask around to see if local vendors or service providers would be willing to donate a couple of items.

T-shirts are also a great way to raise some extra money, which you can sell separately or include with the entry ticket. They also serve as great future marketing...

Supplies you may need:

- Paper tickets for entrance and raffle
- Multiple card tables—at least one at the entrance with a cashbox and a bucket for ticket collection, another for serving refreshments, and how many ever more you need to display bidding items if having a silent auction
- Round tables, table cloths, chairs, and table decorations for dancers to be able to sit and take a breather
- A hat, bucket, or bowl for tickets if holding a raffle
- T-shirt making supplies if selling t-shirts
